Every Item Has a Story...

399
Strand

If it seems unusual that the PUC £1 - a stamp used to promote a conference about international co-operation - features a very elaborate, yet violent, design showing St George attacking a dragon, it is because this design was not originally intended for this stamp.

This Elizabeth I pound is a superb example of English Renaissance metallic art. Elizabeth was extremely fussy about her appearance; she personally inspected examples of her portrait and chose designs as it's known that she destroyed any which she judged to be inferior.
